LOSE TRACE OF LINDBERGH SINCE LEAVING HAVANA

After Having Been In Air More Than 12 Hours Lone Eagle Cannot Be Located.

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 13.—(AP)—A radio message received here by Lieut. Justin Lee, United States naval reserve force, said an airplane thought to have been that of Colonel Lindbergh en route from Havana to St. Louis passed over Sarasota, Fla., at 6:50 a. m. today, flying in a northerly direction.

The message said the plane was flying above the clouds and could not be seen, but the motor was heard distinctly.

Washington, Feb. 13.—(AP)—Rain and low visibilities over the entire southeastern section of the country over which Lindbergh planned to fly on his trip from Havana to St. Louis will continue throughout the day, the weather bureau said.

In the opinion of the bureau Lindbergh could not have picked a worse day to make the flight in quite a while.

Rains are extensive over the territory from north Florida to St. Louis, the bureau said, but have not extended over the states west of the Mississippi. The winds are blowing from the east and are favorable to the flight.

Lindbergh did not receive a weather forecast from the Washington bureau before taking off today, but they have received one from Havana where there is a station.

New York, Feb. 13.—(AP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh took off from Havana today for St. Louis in the last leg of his good will tour among the Southern Republics, but he was not reported seen at all during more than time enough for him to pass well beyond his half way point.

At 10:25 this morning, eight hours after his takeoff, he should have been over Jackson, Miss., if he followed the Florida coast line or about half way between Jackson and Little Rock, Ark.

This is figuring on a speed of 100 miles an hour.

Stations along Lindbergh's scheduled route reported that it would not be possible to see him unless he was flying low. Radio, wireless and other possible checking sources along the Florida and gulf coasts had heard nothing from the flier. Ships in the vicinity of the gulf coast had made no report of seeing him.

Mrs. Allen Barnes, Homer Barnes and Maude Barnes, of McKnightstown R. D., and Mr. and Mrs. Paul F. Osborn, of Biglerville, journeyed to Philadelphia on Sunday to visit Allen Barnes, who has been a patient at the Jefferson hospital for the last month. Mr. Barnes had a fall from a ladder while picking apples on the farm of William Oyler, last fall, which caused a bruise necessitating a bone graft.

A splint of bone eight and one half inches in length was taken from his left leg and grafted to his back bone at his hips. The operation was a success, Doctor Rugh, who performed it, states. Mr. Barnes is now in a cast from his shoulders to his hips and is getting along very nicely, but will be confined to the hospital for several weeks to come.

Mrs. Lewars Gives Readings Before Club

Mrs. Elsie Singmaster Lewars, Seminary Ridge, read several of her stories at a meeting of the Frederick Branch American Association of University women, held at Hood college, Thursday evening. Mrs. Lewars read "The Fiery Cross," a short story from her pen which appeared in a recent issue of the Atlantic Monthly, dealing with the experiences of an aged colored woman during the convocation of the Ku Klux Klan here last Memorial Day. The second reading which Mrs. Lewars gave was another of her short stories about the "Pennsylvania Dutch" characters from Lancaster and surrounding counties, about whom she has built a number of interesting tales.

Valentines On Sale In Stores Quite Modernized

With Valentine day tomorrow, the bashful swains will have to be on the alert or the "ferocious females" will nab them, if for nothing else than to keep up the tradition of leap year.

While most of the drug and novelty stores have been displaying their Valentine offerings for several weeks there are still plenty on hand for the proverbial "last minute rush", but not all of them bear endearing sentiments. In fact some of them go so far that they are next to libelous, provided the recipient of one does not have a sense of humor.

While St. Valentine's day is the day of lovers, it is also a rare opportunity for the school boys who wish to express their opinions of their teachers and other older persons anonymously through the caricatures selling at a cent apiece, but for the love-sick the more expensive forms of missives—some selling as high as $2.50 and $3 for a gaily bedecked, lace embroidered memento, the day portends much.

The Valentines, following the trend of the times, have been highly modernized although the custom of sending love tokens on this day comes down from the third century.

G O P WOMEN HEAR STATE SECRETARY

Mrs. Walter K. Sharpe, Chambersburg, Speaker at Anniversary Meeting.

A large crowd of Republican women from Gettysburg and many sections of Adams county gathered at the Y. W. C. A. building, Centre Square, Saturday afternoon for the special meeting of the Republican Women's club of Adams county, held annually in February to commemorate the birthday anniversaries of Lincoln and Washington.

The meeting was opened with prayer by Miss Mary McConaughy, first vice president of the club, followed by the singing of America. After a brief business session, Mrs. Roy Zinn sang a patriotic air. Mrs. Maude Wierman Kennedy, president, who presided, then introduced the guest of honor and speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. Walter King Sharpe, of Chambersburg, whose topic was "What the Pennsylvania Council of Republican Women Means to the State".

Mrs. Sharpe described the growth and character of the council as the largest and only leading Republican organization in the state. She stressed especially the power of unity and organization among women, and loyalty to the party. She deplored the rather slow growth in the number of women voters, and described the vital things of human existence that are closely affected by politics, especially welfare and education.

Mrs. Sharpe is filling the position of corresponding secretary to the Pennsylvania Council of Republican Women and is also a member of the board of directors. At the close of the meeting an informal reception for Mrs. Sharpe was held during which the social committee of the club, with Mrs. Marie A. Zeigler as chairman, served refreshments. Mrs. Samuel McCall, Mrs. Rhinehardt Dempwolf, Mrs. Jay Clifford Heiges and Miss Mildred Strickler, of the York county council, were among the out-of-town guests present.

The Hershey creamery company has purchased the milk receiving station of Kelly and Oyler, Buford avenue, and will take possession of the business on Wednesday. Irvin Kelly and Edward Oyler, who had conducted the milk receiving station for 25 years, will devote their time to their coal business.

The Hershey company, which now operates a milk receiving station along the Western Maryland railroad, between Carlisle and North Washington streets, has under consideration the closing down of the present station and enlarging the Kelly and Oyler stand, it is reported.

Abraham Lincoln

On the anniversary of his birthday, a number of Gettysburg residents today recounted their acquaintances with the Civil War president.

William H. Tipton, wartime photographer, will tell of Lincoln's memorable visit to Gettysburg in 1863, at the weekly meeting of the Gettysburg Rotary Club.

Dean P. M. Bickle, who as a student at Gettysburg college heard Lincoln speak in the National cemetery, also recalled that experience today.

In the Gettysburg Presbyterian church, Sunday, William A. McIlhenny, Gettysburg civil war veteran, told of shaking hands twice with Lincoln, once here and another time in Frederick.

Mr. McIlhenny, who was home because of an injury to his right arm, met the Civil War president at the home of Judge Wills, Center Square, where Lincoln spent the night of November 18, 1863.

COUNTY NATIVE IS CANDIDATE FOR SENATE SEAT

Dr. G. Willis Hartman Would Go To Democratic Convention Opposed To Smith.

Dr. G. Willis Hartman, of Harrisburg, a native of Adams county, cousin of Dr. H. M. Hartman, Springs avenue, and a frequent visitor here, is a candidate from the Dauphin-Cumberland-Lebanon congressional district to the Democratic national convention at Houston, Texas.

He is an announced "dry" candidate and is opposed to the nomination of Governor Al Smith, of New York, for the presidency. His announcement came at the instance of the McCormick faction in the Democratic party in his district, as opposed to the Guffy wing, which is openly pledged to Smith. He opposes Warren Van Dyke for the election as delegate in the primary, April 24.

Doctor Hartman was born along the Gettysburg-Littlestown road. He is a prominent physician and surgeon in the capital city, residing at 801 North Third street, Harrisburg. In announcing his candidacy today, the Harrisburg Patriot, a McCormick newspaper, says editorially that Doctor Hartman is "a man worthy of the confidence of the members of his party," adding that "the typifies that democracy which is law-abiding, staunchly American in defense of the Constitution, hostile to bi-partisanship and the big city machines which are part of it. Only such a delegate can accurately represent this congressional district."

Renoted a "Bad Man"

The death of Samuel Shockey ends the career of a man who in his own community inspired fear because of his reputation as a "bad man" and who has been known to police for years. First, he had been sought by police on charges of forgery. It was in March, 1924, that police combed the mountains, seeking him for the murder of his brother, Jacob Shockey. Jacob fell in a duel fought on the mountainside while his young bride looked on. At the time Samuel was a fugitive from justice and had been warned by Jacob to stay away from Jacob's wife. This caused the quarrel that ended in the death of the brother. A witness testified that Jacob had yielded to Samuel's demand to "fight it out" when the two went into the mountains.

After an exchange of shots Jacob was dead and Samuel was fleeing into the mountains with his brother's widow. Snow foiled the bloodhounds that were first used by police in an attempt to trail the slayer. After a week's search the police surprised Samuel and his brother's wife in their hiding place in the mountains. Samuel was convicted of second degree murder.

After his trial and conviction Shockey made the threat that he would "get" certain of his neighbors who, he said, had informed on him.

Escaped From Barracks

For four years Shockey was in the Eastern Penitentiary at Philadelphia. During that time his behavior earned him the liberties of a trusty. On the night of January 10, this year, he escaped from the convict barracks at Graterford where he had been at work on the construction of the new penitentiary.

Following the news of his escape came the report that he had returned.

Escaped Convict Killed By Three Bullets; Police Searching For Slayer.

Samuel Shockey, fratricide and escaped convict, died at the hands of one of the many persons he had attempted to terrorize Saturday morning, it is the belief of Franklin county authorities.

With three bullet wounds in his head and chest the escaped murderer was found lying near a path two and a half miles north of Beartown by another brother, Christian Shockey and a nephew, Reuben Shockey, Saturday afternoon.

First believed to have been a suicide, an autopsy showed that three sponge-ball bullets fired from a shotgun had put an end to the comparatively short criminal career of the mountaineer "bad man."

The autopsy showed that one of the bullets entered under the right arm, another in the chest, piercing the man's heart, and the third entered his right eye.

Franklin county authorities who took up the search for the man who had done Shockey to the death stated today that while there were no definite clues to the man's assailant suspicion pointed to several "avowed enemies" of the convict, whom he had threatened for the aid which they gave state authorities after he had killed his brother four years ago.

Search of the mountains back of Beartown by police authorities revealed the den where the man had been holding forth since his escape from the penitentiary. A quantity of canned goods, candy and provisions and a large number of high-powered rifle bullets but no guns were found, police say.

Chief of Police George Byers, of Waynesboro, told a Times reporter over the telephone this afternoon that an intensive search was being made for Shockey's slayer and that while several promising clues have been found none of them are of such a nature that the crime can be pinned on any particular person.

Despite denials of Shockey's threat to "get" a number of the residents of Beartown, the mountain hamlet where he was born and raised, several families left that place when it was learned that Shockey had escaped from the Eastern penitentiary four weeks ago.

turned to the mountains in the vicinity of Beartown and his neighbors of four years ago remembered the threats he had made. It was certain that some of the members of the community feared Shockey. Reports, later denied by some, came from Beartown that twenty families had moved from the community when they heard of Shockey's reappearance. He continued to evade the police searching for him until the time of his death.

First word of Shockey since his escape came to police when they learned that he had sought refuge in the home of Charles Wade, three miles south of Beartown, over the Mason and Dixon line in Maryland. With two other men Shockey had obtained lodging under an assumed name.

Shortly after the three took up their lodging at the Wade home they got into a fight and a bullet fired by the fighters pierced the floor of their room, narrowly missing a member of the Wade family in a room below. Police were notified but arrived too late to apprehend the fugitive although they trailed him several miles in the snow. Shockey's convict clothing was found in the Wade home.

On Way To Meet Brother
After this Shockey is believed to have lived in the mountains near his home, Christian Shockey, the brother who found the body, admitted that he was in communication with Samuel when he told them that he was on his way to meet Sam when he found the body. Christian said that they had arranged the meeting the preceding day and that he, Christian, was to cut Sam's hair after which the fugitive had planned to go to the Waynesboro to give himself up to the police.

Christian came upon the body in a rocky section of the mountain woodland near the Salt Lick road on what is known as the "Old Bailey Place," near the Bailey Spring about a mile east of Beartown.

Because of the shock upon suddenly seeing his brother's mutilated body, Christian did not make a close examination. He said that a gun was lying on the ground near the body. It was a single barrel 12-gauge gun holding a shell that had been discharged. A new pair of shoes, in addition to the pair Samuel was wearing, was found near the body.

Powder marks were found on the clothing that would indicate the shots were fired at close range. It is believed by police that Samuel was ambushed, shot the second or third time after he fell or else the victim of a fusillade. The shot from the 12-gauge gun might have been fired in defense.

The body was taken to an undertaking establishment at Waynesboro and Coroner Shull, of Chambersburg, was called. Following the autopsy the coroner said an inquest would be held tonight.

Samuel Shockey is survived by his father, Jacob Shockey, of Tryon, Md., and the following brothers and sister: Christian Shockey, Elmer Shockey, Ralph Shockey, and Mrs. Hattie Reese, all of that vicinity. He was twenty-seven years old.

Hoover Announces For Presidency

Washington, Feb. 13.—(AP)—Secretary Hoover yesterday became an avowed candidate for the Republican presidential nomination and gave formal permission for his Ohio supporters to enter his name in the Ohio primary contest.

In his campaign statement, which took the form of a letter to Thad M. Brown, chairman of the Ohio Hoover-for-President committee, the secretary declared himself bound "to carry forward the principles of the Republican party and the great objectives of President Coolidge's policies."

He indicated his intention to refrain from personal campaigning in the pre-convention primaries, and to retain his official post at the head of the commerce department.

SENATE LIKELY TO PROBE STRIKE

Strike of Miners in Pennsylvania
Coal Fields Will Come Up
For Investigation.

Washington, Febr. 13.—(AP)—A two-barrelled Senate inquiry into the Pennsylvania coal strike situation was in the offing Friday night as a result of the day's developments at Capitol Hill.

After a plea by representatives of the miners, the Senate Inter-State Commerce committee deferred action on the Johnson resolution for an inquiry by that committee, but Chairman Watson said a prima facie case had been made out and the resolution would be reported favorably.

Seven committeemen who considered the resolution were unanimous in the opinion that the inquiry, which is to go also into the conditions in the mining districts of Ohio and West Virginia should be conducted by a special committee.

The Pennsylvania situation was brought forcibly to the attention of a Senate Judiciary sub-committee by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and members indicated that this committee not only would seek the facts in that case, but also with respect to happenings in the recent street car strike in Indianapolis as a result of which some striking trainmen went to jail for contempt of court.

Green presented these two specific cases to the sub-committee as a part of his argument in support of the Shipstead bill to restrict federal courts in the issuance of injunctions in labor disputes. The federation head said he was not opposing injunctions designed to prevent violence, but did oppose their operation to work hardships on union workmen.

Philip Murray, International Vice President of the United Mine Workers of America, was the only witness before the committee. He described the "pitiable conditions" among the mine workers.

GALE IN SWEDEN FATAL TO SCORE

Millions of Fish Are Killed and Washed Ashore by Terrific Storms Sweeping Coast.

Stockholm, Feb. 13.—(AP)—From twenty to twenty-five lives are known to have been taken by a furious storm which swept in from the British Isles Saturday and ravaged the whole northern country. Shipping was demoralized and the sea was pounded with such force that millions of fish were killed and washed ashore.

Most of the casualties were reported from the vicinity of Soerland and Vestland, where the gale attained its maximum velocity, crushing houses, barns and causing loss to property as well as to livestock. Millions of dead fish were swept ashore. Scientists attribute the death of the fish to sulphurated hydrogen which came to the surface from the ocean bottom when disturbed by the gale.

A fish famine threatens, as housewives refuse to buy them, fearing the fish are poisoned.

MATADORS TURN THRIFTY

Madrid, Spain.—(AP)—Tailors who specialize in bullfighters' uniforms are in the doldrums. Business has been dull, they say, because the matadors do not wear suits in the ring as gray and colorful as of yore. In the good old days the crack bull niggers had a new suit for nearly every fight. Nowadays a suit is made to last, with good luck in escaping the bulls' horns, sometimes for months.

FOREST GAIN FORESEEN

Washington.—(AP)—Federal foresters expect intensive management of American forests ultimately to result in an annual yield of more than 27,000,000,000 cubic feet of wood products. Adequate protection from fire, they declare, plus even crude forestry practice, would increase the present estimated net growth of 6,000,000,000 cubic feet per year to 10,000,000,000 by 1950.

GAME LAWS MAKE TURKEYS TAMER

Wild Fowls Are Becoming Domesticated Under Regime of New Legislation in Texas.

Roosevelt, Tex.—(AP)—Wild turkeys are becoming tamer, since they have received the protection of hunting laws, while domestic turkeys, as if warned that the ax will fall, frequently become wild by wandering away from farms and joining the game flocks in the hills.

From the hunters' point of view, the situation has become vexing. A farmer may observe within gun range a flock of wild turkeys, but the birds strut about as if informed that they are within a pasture set aside by the game warden as their refuge. The hunter goes on and approaches another flock in which the birds are wilder. But as they cross the road he notices their greater size and realizes that firing at them would make him guilty of destroying some farmer's personal property.

Wild turkeys are smaller and darker than the domestic species.

FIGHT STINKING SMUT

Wheat growers who have not treated their seed with copper carbonate to prevent bunt, or stinking smut, are advised to do so now. Winter usually allows more time for the work, and there is the added advantage of protection from rats, mice and weevils which rarely touch treated seed. Copper carbonate is poisonous, and seed treated with it never should be sold for food.

BULLETS ON WAY TO LEAGUE TITLE

Win Third of Series of Four Games For Championship of Court Conference.

With three of the four games scheduled with the Middle Atlantic state collegiate athletic conference teams tucked away to their credit, the Orange and Blue eagles are standing good chances of coping the title this year. The defeat of Drexel Saturday night before a fair-sized crowd at the Eddie Plank Memorial gymnasium by a score of 54-35 was the third milestone on the way to the league title and only Lehigh stands in the way of the powerful Bream-coached team.

Staging a complete reversal of form from their Friday night performance when they lost to Georgetown the Bullet passers swept to an easy victory over the Drexel horde and piled up a comfortable lead which was never threatened. The Bullets started off with an uncanny attack which placed them permanently in the lead and at half-time the score stood 28-13. The score reached the half-century mark when Coach Bream "pulled out" the first stringers and Challenger was the only one of the substituted players to cage a field goal, but Doyle and Cockley each accounted for a free toss.

Captain Fritz Haller had his shooting eye working and caged a total of 20 points, nine of them from the field. Cramer and Hoke were next in order with totals of 11 and 10, Hey, the name of a player and not a salutation, was high man for the visitors scoring 10 points.

The Orange and Blue will entertain the Orange and Green terrors from Western Maryland here on Friday night in the last home game until Bucknell comes here in the last game of the season on March 9.

13 DIE IN BLAST IN RESCUE EFFORT

8 Others Escape From Pit in Which 43 Men Had Perished
Last December.

Whitehaven, England, Feb. 13.—(AP)—A terrific explosion yesterday in the Haig mine pit killed thirteen of a party of twenty-one who were exploring the works for the first time since a similar disaster closed it last December.

Several officials were among those killed. Eight dazed and partially gassed workmen fought their way back to safety. The news they brought caused desperate efforts by rescue parties to reach the entombed men, but the foul air foiled their attempts. All hope was abandoned at noon. The relief workers were withdrawn and the mine was again sealed.

Thirty-nine lives were lost through an explosion in the same pit September 5, 1922, and again last December the works suffered a blast which took four lives. An exploration party was organized Saturday and shortly after midnight entered the shaft in an attempt to locate the body of one of the miners killed in December. At that time fire had prevented the recovery of the body and the pit had been sealed up until the fire should burn itself out for want of oxygen.

The party, which included several mine experts, carried oxygen and made good progress until the men neared the scene of the December explosion, where four blasts occurred within ten minutes. The last was a violent one, filling the mine with bad air.

Farm Boys Study Seed Corn Selection

Washington.—(AP)—In every corn-growing section of the country 4-H club boys, the prospective farmers of the future, are going into the fields with their own leaders or government extension agents to study seed selection of the department of agriculture. The job has the cooperative attention of the department of agriculture and the various state agricultural colleges.

"To be a good farmer," the boys are told, "it is essential to know how to pick seed that under ordinary conditions will produce an abundant crop of high quality for the least expenditure of effort and money."

LUNATICS KILL TWO IN BREAK

Bridgewater, Mass., Feb. 13.—(AP)—A night supervisor and a night watchman were strangled to death when five of the inmates of the state hospital for the insane here made a break for liberty early today. Two other night watchmen were injured. Handicapped by the absence of eye witnesses and the reluctance or the inability of the inmates concerned to give a coherent story of what occurred, officials were obliged to resort largely to conjecture in order to piece together the story of what had happened.

THE JAZZ SINGER

NOVELIZED BY
ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"THE JAZZ SINGER," starring Al Jolson, is a Warner Bros. picture-ization of this novel. It is based upon the play by Samson Raphaelson.

SYNOPSIS

The New York Ghetto seethes in preparation for its important holiday, Yom Kippur. Cantor Rabinowitz, who has taught his son, Jackie, the Hebrew songs, preparing him to be a cantor also, is horrified by the child's statement that he wants to sing in a theatre. That afternoon the Cantor discovers that Jackie is already singing ragtime in a "beer garden." He whips his son and the boy runs away from home on the Eve of the Day of Atonement. Ten years elapse and the scene changes to a vaudeville booking office in San Francisco. An actress is crashing the gate of the manager's sanctum.

"Is that so?" The blonde reached out a hefty arm and swept the boy to one side. "Not to me he ain't." Without stopping to knock she threw open the door to the inner sanctum and disappeared banging it behind her.

The boy stared, open-mouthed. The waiters glared hopelessly, wondering. The boy watched after the departed figure for a moment, then shrugged his shoulders and sat down. He pulled a piece of paper from the desk drawer, inserted it in the typewriter before him, and languidly hammered the keys. "Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their party," he wrote over and over again. Silence, save for the click-click of the machine, brooded once more over the room.

A very obvious Actor—spelled with a capital A—ran a lean hand through his Shakespearean locks, flicked a speck of dust from his too-many-times-pressed suit, and shook his head. A pair of pretty twins in short, organdie dresses, who had arrived some hours before giggling irrepressibly, settled down once more to face stern reality and resume their haggling over a cross word puzzle. A young man, slightly pudgy, with a suit that had once been well tailored but which now showed the effects of travel—and not particularly de luxe travel—decided to snatch forty winks of sleep betimes.

Again the door opened, this time to admit a personable young man, obviously down on his luck. It was evident that he had made an attempt at spruceness, but his turned cuffs, his cheap tie, and his shiny suit told their own story. He paused, gazing irresolutely about the room, and then hesitatingly walked to the railing in front of the desk. The office boy assumed a greater interest in his work, not deigning to glance at the new arrival. The applicant cleared his throat nervously.

"I'd like to see Mr. Schuler, please," he began.

"Can't be done," snapped the boy, not lifting his eyes from his work. "He's in an important conference."

The young man turned slowly and swallowed a lump in his throat. It was just another turn down, and he should be getting used to them by this time, he thought. But even ten years of hunting jobs had not quite hardened his sensibilities. Ten long years and three thousand miles of weary travel from the Ghetto could work many changes, however—and had. It was a long jump from Jackie Rabinowitz to Jack Robin and it had taken the ten years and three thousand miles to make the jump. And so the little Jackie Rabinowitz that was swallowed hard, and the Jack Robin of the now looked about for a chair in the Star Vaudeville Circuit, San Francisco Branch offices.

The pudgy, not-so-well-dressed young man, had been staring at the newcomer. And now, as Jack Robin turned, the man jumped up from his chair and held out his hand.

"Well, if it ain't my old partner from the sticks," the pudgy young man laughing and pumping Jack's hand up and down with tremendous gusto. "Buster Billings! Well, what th'—what are you doing here?" Jack grasped his friend's hand with an equal heartiness.

"Same thing you are, Huntin' a bookin'." How'd you get here?" he demanded.

"Long story, Buster," Jack returned. "Gee, it's great seeing you again. Let me see. Last time I saw you, you were getting ready to climb a side door Pullman out in Cheyenne."

"Yeh, that's right," Buster laughed at the memory. "Ran onto a streak of hard luck down in Texas after that, and walked the ties for a while. Then I found an ol' pal puttin' on a song an' dance act out in Albuquerque an' he put me wise to a joint, 'Shilver-verlin' Sal's Place'—ever hear of it? Jack shook his head.

"Some joint, believe me," Buster continued. "But I got a work-out there, an' they took me on for a comedy monologue in the cabaret. I got my notices all right an' a good break, but I was itchin' for 'Frisco, an' soon's I got enough Jack ahead I beat it. Spent most of it playin' Seven-Up on the train, though," he added, laughing. "Where've you been?"

"Well, let's see," Jack began. "I had a couple more weeks out you left, and then I was out. I got a job singing 'mammy' songs in a cafe, but it didn't go over so big. About that time I decided I'd better move on, so I hopped a train for Santa Fe. Thought maybe I might get some kind of a booking there, but—nothing stirring. I got lots of promises, but I couldn't eat them. Money ran out—well, you know that story."

Buster nodded sympathetically. "I sure do," he grinned. "Well, anyhow, I started to walk. I wanted to make 'Frisco myself, but I landed in Phoenix." "Great little town—not!" Buster interrupted.

"Oh, I got a job there, anyhow," Jack went on. "One of these night life places where there was plenty of night and not so much life. But I caught up with a little money, and then the place went bust. I took to tramping the streets again, but it was coming summer and there wasn't a thing to be had anyplace. I lasted through, but I was on my uppers by fall. Just about that time I heard of a show that was going out."

"Pretty tough, kid," Buster commented. "Well, to make a long story short I got hold of the manager and he talked cold turkey," Jack explained. "And after a week's rehearsal we headed for the sticks—and when I say sticks I don't mean maybe. I think we played every town hall in Arizona, Utah and Nevada."

"Don't," groaned Buster. "I know. I've been there myself, an' I hate to be remembered of them little unpleasant things. Ever strike Escalante, Nevada?" "Did I?" Jack nodded sorrowfully. "What a town. There were three people in the audience, and not one of them cracked a smile."

"An' the Edwards House! What a joint! Did you stay there?" "Did we stay there? Say, all we did was sleep when we could on the train—and no sleepers for our outfit. We sat up."

"Oh, well, it's all in the game," Buster philosophized. "Sure," Jack agreed. "Well, anyhow, we finally got as far as Sweetwater, Nevada, and the winter was pretty near gone. And I thought I was in luck because, even though I'd only been getting thirty a week and pay my own expenses, I'd managed to keep the job going. But as I started to say, we got to Sweetwater, and our next jump was Calver, Cal. We got on the train that night—or about two in the morning. No one looked around for the manager—he wasn't so popular, anyhow, and when we woke up in Calver the boy friend was minus."

"Skipped?" Buster questioned ironically. "Sure, and it was Saturday and pay day. He just beat it and left the whole C. O. flat. Stranded! And how. Well, we didn't have any scenery—nothing but a back drop, and nothing to hook. So we had to get out the best way we could. I headed for Frisco. Picked up some lifts along the way and some meals from farm houses, and landed in here yesterday. Say, think there's a chance of anything doing here?"

Buster shook his head wearily. "I been comin' over here the last four days an' this guy ain't seen no one yet."

"That's not so hot," Jack commented.

The pair sat in silence for a time.

"O, by the way, there's a friend of yours playin' here," Buster smiled slyly.

"Friend of mine? Who?" Jack asked, coming to with a start.

"Mary Dale."

Jack colored and looked out of the window.

HIGH TROUNCES WAYNESBORO

Sends Winners of Scholastic League Down to Defeat in Cleverly Played Game.

Gettysburg high school continued its winning streak on Saturday night by defeating Waynesboro high, champions of the Cumberland Valley Scholastic league, at Waynesboro by a 33-23 score. The victory was the fourteenth of the season for the Martimmen and their seventh straight.

The Blue and Gold Tornado flashed surprising strength during the first half and led through the period. The home club took advantage of some rather sluggish playing on the part of the Martimmen and grabbed a 7-6 lead at the end of the first quarter. In the second quarter the Waynesboro team displayed a fine passing game and with Snider and Fisher scoring frequently from the field took a commanding lead at half time, 19-11.

After the intermission the Maroon and White aggregation got down to real basketball and showed the Waynesboro fans the kind of basketball exhibited in the Central Pennsylvania Interscholastic league. With Gilbert and Warren heading the list the Martimmen rapidly closed the Waynesboro lead. Bowers looped two goals in this period to give the Blue and Gold a 23-22 lead at the end of the third quarter. In the last session the Waynesboro club cracked completely and failed to score a point. The Maroons forged quickly to the front and were well in the lead at the end of the game.

"Shorty" Warren and Russ Gilbert led the scoring for the locals as well as playing brilliant floor games. Captain Bowers and Fisher were the luminaries for the vanquished five.

Stamp Helped Settle Site Of Panama Canal

San Francisco.—(AP)—A Nicaraguan postage stamp had a lot to do with the decision of the United States to build a canal across the Isthmus of Panama instead of through Nicaragua.

The story is told by Judge Francis Butler Loomis, assistant secretary of state under the late John Hay, who helped negotiate for American acquisition of the canal zone.

There was a debate in the Senate over the two routes, Loomis recalls, and advocates of Nicaragua appeared to be winning when some speaker protested that volcanoes there would menace the big ditch. Champions of the Nicaragua route retorted that there were no volcanoes in that country.

A foe of the Nicaragua canal rose and exhibited a letter bearing a Nicaragua postage stamp, portraying a volcano in eruption. It brought down the house, and was a factor in final approval of the Isthmus route.

RICH CHEMICALS IN BLACK SEA

Chemical Deposits Worth Billions to be Extracted by British Concern.

Haifa, Palestine.—(AP)—Every tale of buried treasure ever spun by imaginative adventurers or some of buccannery is dwarfed by the wealth which a British-Palestine syndicate is preparing to extract from the Dead Sea.

The company has obtained preference over American and continental bidders for the concession, and as soon as the harbor which the government of Palestine has planned here is constructed and when 20 miles of electric railway are built to link Haifa with the shore of the Dead Sea, the work of turning salt into money will begin.

From the body of water famous in Biblical narrative the syndicate plans to extract some 1,300,000,000 tons of potash worth $70,000,000 and 853,000,000 tons of bromine value at $250,000,000,000.

According to representatives of Major Tulloch, British engineer, and Novemysky, Palestine chemist and civil engineer, who head the British-Palestine syndicate, the Dead Sea contains sodium chloride, potassium chloride, magnesium chloride and bromides.

By a process of evaporation, the Dead Sea produces common salt in great quantities containing carnallite, which treated with hot water resolves into solid potassium chloride and the solution containing magnesium chloride and magnesium bromide. A simple process turns the potassium chloride into potash in demand for fertilizing arable fields.

The resources of the Dead Sea are considered to be practically inexhaustible, since the strength of the brine increases year by year. A good deal of the brine seems to come from the streams which flow from the desolated high lands of Palestine after rains.

Potash hitherto has been almost exclusively a German monopoly in Europe. Britain plans by this new development to produce its fertilizer within its own empire.

The extraction of potash and other chemicals from the Dead Sea has been under consideration for nearly 30 years. Schemes had about reached a head when the world war broke out. Before the end of the war Palestine had become a British mandate, losing its Turkish sovereignty, and after the war plans for the new industry acquired fresh life.

Bows And Surplice In Unusual Grouping

—Advertisement

A GAY contrast, here, and quite in the latest vein of style. Above, a surplised effect with an unusual line; below, the ripple of multiple pleats. Perfect, this dress, for any afternoon bridge or matinee. The two piece frock has combined many smart and becoming features. Pleats are always good, and may be changed by grouping to the taste of the wearer. The clever cut of the blouse, which is relieved of severity by two soft bows, makes this a charming addition to any wardrobe. Plain or printed georgette, crepe de chine, silk voile, or sheer wools are good for this style, or a combination of printed material for blouse and plain for the skirt might be used. Out of the Past

Happenings of Days Gone by as Chronicled in The Star and Sentinel and The Gettysburg Times, the Files Reveal.
ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO
Mildness of the Season.—It is stated in the Perry Forester of last week that a black snake three feet long was killed in Toboyne township on the first day of January. In this place about the same time dandelions were in full bloom, and on the 18th of January tulips and other flowers were in full bloom in the garden of Robert Mahon, near Shippensburg. The southern folks for some time past have been boasting of asparagus, lettuce, watermelons, fresh shad, and the like, trees in blossom etc. To all this we may say the seasons change, whilst Time goes steadily on in the old fashion.

Married.—On the 24th ult., by the Rev. Mr. Boerster, John Bowers to Miss Betty Sharrer, both of Liberty township.
On the same day by the Rev. L. L. Hinsch, John Miller to Miss Polly Wierman, both of Huntingdon township.
On the 29th by the same, Peter Deardorff to Miss Mary M. Shriver, both of Reading township.
On Thursday last, by the same, John Hartman, of Franklin township, to Miss Lucy Ann Alter, of Franklin City.

The Editor of the Compiler has, with an evident reluctance, retracted his assertion that we had "shamefully traduced" Mr. Wilson. A little reflection is sometimes necessary before such sweeping charges are made.
As to his latter paragraph, we merely remark that an honest opposition to any candidate for office is a right and privilege we all enjoy—and cannot be called "shameful traduction" unless it partakes of the scurrility which has so distinguished some papers we could name.

(Adv.) The American System.—persons to whose care memorials upon this subject were entrusted are desired to forward them (agreeably to a resolution of the late County Meeting of the friends of Domestic Manufactures) to the subscriber, secretary of that meeting.
ROBERT G. HARPER.

Negroes in Canada.—The Montreal Gazette mentions that great numbers of negroes (probably from Kentucky) have settled in the western part of Canada, where they have introduced the culture of tobacco, and in six years raised the export from almost nothing to 5 or 600 hogheads.

Fatal Duel.—We learn that on Saturday morning last, Mr. Martin and Mr. Carr, students of medicine, left this city for the District of Columbia to an affair of honor, and we are pained to add that a meeting took place, in which the first named was killed at the first fire, having received his antagonist's ball in the forehead. The body of Mr. Martin, we understand, was brought to this city yesterday. Of the cause which led to this tragical

RAG-BAG MINDS

I AM indebted for this title to a delightfully written little essay by James Agate, a new writer friend. I discovered him in a book that was underneath another one that I was looking for in a book shop. Isn't it thrilling to find a new friend behind an old one?
Most of us remember the old rag-bag that our mothers had hung handy in some part of the house. Into it went every little bit of odds and ends that her economical mind and beauty loving soul could not throw away or destroy.
And so I think that in a secret corner, at least, of each one of our minds hangs a rag-bag of some sort that catches up from our careless, flitting minds odds and ends of thoughts, bits of song and story, sparks of adventure, couplets of poetry, tiny dashes of romance, and other what-nots. Things that somehow have an intimate preciousness about them, and yet which in themselves are quite useless. Something out of which we may sometime piece out something that has the resemblance of a whole, like a crazy quilt, perhaps.
At least we can go dreaming over these simple gatherings. And what a happy dream that would be if it were to wash out a troubled mind, or a discouraged hour, or add gusto to a dull day!
I have known many people who have stored in their minds a little about a multitude of things. Modestly I may confess to belonging to this group. And I rather think that such folks are vastly more interesting and happy than those who know a great deal about but a few things.
So I would say: Keep the rag-bag in your mind. Keep putting something into it every day. But, if humanly possible, do try to select from that bag, from time to time, enough of its odds and ends, its curlicues and frills, to make something out of, that stands apart definitely individual and useful—something that you can give away.

Just Folks

THRIFT

I'm for thrift, but I can't see Saving money needlessly For the rainy day to be.
Save your money, I should say For another rainy day; Save a bit to give away.

Thrift's the road to wealth, I've learned; Money saved is money earned; Holes in pockets gold has burned.
But I'd say don't clench your fist And the muscles of your wrist Holding what will not be missed.

Save your money, so that when You encounter needy men, You can help them, now and then.
Save it so that you can spend In the service of a friend, Save a little just to lend.
Save to keep the wolf at bay, Save to meet the rainy day, But save a bit to give away.

As the two little rabbits skimmed over the snow in their sledmobile, all of a sudden whom should they see but Mr. Wicked Wolf. Oh, dear, oh, dear! "Hello, Mr. Lucky Leftthindfoot," cried the wicked beast, jumping right in front of the sledmobile.
"Get out of the way or I'll run over you!" bravely shouted the old gentleman rabbit. But that dreadful wolf never moved a foot. No, sir, not an inch. He just stood there with his mouth wide open, showing all his long, white teeth.

"Goodness me, if I run over him, I may be arrested; and if I don't he will eat me,—so, what shall I do?" cried perplexed Uncle Lucky.

"Tell Little Jack Rabbit to get cut his gun; He might shoot Mr. Wicked Wolf just in fun. And then if that dreadful beast won't go, I'll tell you something else I know."

cried a little voice from the tree top. But Mr. Wicked Wolf only laughed and drew closer to the sledmobile when the bunny boy, after taking his little pop-gun from his knapsack pointed it at him.

"Dear, dear, dearest me! Now we are done for, I know it, I know it," exclaimed the old gentleman rabbit.

"If you have a bag of peanuts In your knapsack, I would say To toss it out to Mr. Wolf, And then he'll run away."

again advised the little voice in the tree tops.

"Quick, open your knapsack," whispered the anxious old gentleman bunny. And, would you believe it? When the little rabbit hunted through his knapsack he found a bag of pen-

The Return Of Elegance To
The Mode

TIME, turning backward as she is supposed to do, has brought to New York the architecture of the hanging gardens of Babylon—and has revived a once-old-fashioned tier effect in skirts. Both are modified, to be sure, and both are eminently successful and arresting. The softly draped jabot of this dress is in one piece with the front waist, and the skirt drapes falls from the top tier of a three-tiered skirt. If the sleeves are long, they too have a slightly flared double tiered set of cuffs. For afternoon or without sleeves—for evening, silk crepe, crepe de chine, or crepe satin are appropriate materials. Prints are only used for afternoons and when this is the case, the pipings may be of plain material to match or blend

TAMMANY HALL TO BE MOVED FARTHER UPTOWN

Historic Wigwag Will Leave
Lower East Side to be Closer to Center of Metropolis.

New York. — (AP) — Tammany Hall, symbol of democracy on the island of Manhattan since 1789, is quitting its 60-year-old home on the fringe of the Bowery.

From its historic "wigwag" on the lower east side, Tammany will move within a year to new quarters farther uptown, closer to the shifting center of the metropolis and not far from Central park and the spires of upper Fifth avenue.

With it will go the paintings of past leaders which hang about the smoky walls, and the statue of Chief Tammany which rises from a metal cornice atop the dingy red brick building. But with the razing of the structure by interests which have acquired the site, a venerable landmark will be missed by a city which has no dearth of landmarks.

To the nation at large Tammany Hall represents the democratic organization which has been a power in New York politics for generations and which sprang from a society founded 136 years ago by William Mooney, Irish upholsterer, to fight the aristocratic federalists under Alexander Hamilton. But there is also a fraternal side of Tammany, or "Columbian Order," closely allied, the charter of which defines it as a "benevolent and charitable society for affording relief to indigent and distressed members, their widows and orphans and other proper objects of charity."

Tammany's political star has not always been ascending, but the society has emerged from frequent political defeats with new vigor. It was hardest hit when "Boss" Tweed was exposed for graft and imprisoned to die in Ludlow street jail. Other scandals have touched it, but they have been survived and to a great extent lived down.

In modern years a "new Tammany" has been heralded, led by such men as former Judge George W. Olvany, present Tammany chieftain; Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York, a sachem in the order; Mayor James J. Walker, U. S. Senator Robert F. Wagner, and James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany.

Since women came into politics they have had a share in Tammany's activities, and teas in the society clubrooms have altered the social program of which Fitz Green Halleck, the poet, sang a century ago:

"There's a barrel of porter in Tammany Hall.
And the Bucktails are swigging it the all day long.

In the time of my youth 'twas a pleasure to call
For a sent and cigar 'mid the jovial throng."

But Tammany today still knows its followers, cares for its friends in need and walks arm in arm with the common folk from which it sprang. And it knows where its political strength lies, almost if not quite as well as in the days of Richard Croker and Big Tim Sullivan.

Sullivan, the story goes, met Croker in Tammany Hall the night before election and told him: "Our vote in the sixth will be 5,367." It turned out to be only 5,364, and Big Tim went to Croker apologizing. "I'm puzzled and ashamed," he said. "There was Peter Mahoney, the republican gave him a $1,200 job and he took it. There was Jim O'Brien, he was too sick to get to the polls. But where the other vote disappeared

The Saddle Shoulder Appears For Coats

EXTREMELY smart in its simple tailored lines, and extremely useful in the days so soon to come, this coat is almost an essential. It looks well in town or out, a-foot or in the limousine. The coat sketched is an example of the distinction of a simple design, for it is suitable to almost all materials. They can be tweeds, novelty weaves, chevrons, camel's hair, flannel, velveteen, or plaids, depending on the occasion on which it will be worn. The collar may be either shawl or notched, and a belt may be added when it is becoming. If worn as an ensemble, the lining should be of the frock's material, or a material to chime with the frock in color.

to I can't tell for the life of me." Croker forgave him and told him not to let it happen again.

There is one man in Tammany to whom the movement of headquarters is not a new experience. He is John R. Voorhis, 97-year-old grand sachem of the Tammany society. He remembers when the hall on East Fourteenth street was new and shining, and when the democrats met there in 1868, for the first national convention held by the party in New York to nominate Horatio Seymour for the presidency.

COUNTY IS RID OF SCRUB BULLS

Craig County, Virginia, Farmers
Have Only Registered Sires
As Business Proposition.

Washington. — (AP) — For the second time in the history of American stock raising an entire county has been found entirely free from scrub and grade bulls.

The distinction falls to Craig county, Virginia. A letter certifying that every sire is a registered purebred and that in each case the owner has registration papers from the department of agriculture.

Union county, Kentucky, is the only other such unit to eliminate inferior stock. Heretofore a number of other counties in various parts of the country have come within one or two bulls of attaining the goal. Both Virginia and Kentucky are pioneers in the campaign for purebred sires. Union county was certified only last year.

Authorities declare the United States leads the world in the better-sires movement. They see the Craig county enterprise as an example of Strong public opinion. It is notable, they say, that scrub bulls were eliminated as a business proposition and not as a "drive."

Seedless Lemon Grown In California Orchard

Oroville, Cal. — (AP) — O. W. Baker, of Petz, California, is the originator of a seedless lemon. At the Orange and Olive exposition here he exhibited his fruit and explained the development of it.

"Several years ago budded my sweet seedling orange trees with a naval orange and an Eureka lemon. The fruit was naval oranges and lemons. I noticed the lemons were seedless and pruned the tree down to the lemon branches. The fruit has since been of good quality and seedless."

Baker also has in his orchard a seedless orange tree which bears navals, seedless lemons, limes and grapefruit.
